SOME PRESS OPINIONS

Athenæum.—"Messrs P. S. King & Son are issuing a Catalogue of Parliamentary Papers, 1801-1900, with a few of earlier date, rightly believing that it will be of service to librarians and students. Parliamentary papers have always appealed to me, and surely to many others, as very often fascinating reading. It is not that their literary style is frequently of a high order of merit, but they present to us facts and not fancies, records and not rumours. And to the student of history, manners, economics, sociology, parliamentary publications are a gold mine of information of a character to be depended upon. It may appear that this is an oft-told tale; it is; but a tale that has not had sufficient hearers as yet. These publications are too often looked upon as dry-as-dust, sometimes they are so, but not often; usually they are very much alive."

Daily Chronicle.—"Even a cursory examination of the titles and the briefs of contents reveals a store of material serviceable to the public man, the librarian, and the thoughtful reader who would extend and rectify his knowledge of modern history. . . . Taken altogether the index is distinctly valuable."

Manchester Guardian.—"It deals with a department of bibliography that has been much neglected, and it will be of great service to serious students of politics. An immense amount of useful material is embedded in the widely diverse publications to which the common name of 'Parliamentary Papers' is given, but it is sometimes very difficult to ascertain the particular paper containing the information that one may desire. . . . Many besides ourselves will be grateful for this catalogue."

Nation (New York).—"This valuable guide to statesman, student, and journalist is sold at a reasonable price of two dollars."

Bookseller.—"A substantial volume. . . . The form adopted, we think, makes the matter more easy of reference than is the case in the Official General Indexes, and the publication should be of value to those interested in political and social questions. Paper with wide margins has been used for the convenience of librarians, who will thus be enabled to place the press-mark, shelf, or reference number against any of the papers they may have in their possession."

Library World.—"This is an indispensable work for public libraries, whether they have sets of the Parliamentary Papers or not. It is largely designed for the use of libraries, and gives an immense amount of valuable information on every subject which has come before Parliament during the past 100 years. The price is ridiculously small, and no library of any kind should neglect to secure this admirably-arranged catalogue."

PUBLISHERS' NOTE

THIS Catalogue does not pretend to be a complete exhaustive list of all the Papers ordered to be printed by Parliament, but it is claimed that the more important Papers, Diplomatic Correspondence, the Reports of Commissions and Select Committees are given in a form more easily referred to than in the Official General Indexes.

An attempt also has been made to give some idea of the contents of the Papers, in those many cases where the title does not give special indication of, or suggest the nature and variety of, the information to be found within the volume.

This publication is an amalgamation of a number of separate Catalogues, dealing with special subjects, which have been issued by our firm during the last fifty years. The task of checking these, bringing them up to date, and arranging the subjects under proper headings, has been a work of considerable magnitude and taken a long time to perform.

The Publishers believe that this Catalogue will be of service to Librarians and Students, as showing the information which has been collected together by Parliament, during the course of a century, on questions of Government, Economics, and the numerous Social subjects connected with the well-being of the Peoples and Countries of the World.

The Catalogue has been printed on paper with wide margins, and the Publishers hope that this will be a convenience to Librarians, as it will enable them to place the press-mark, shelf, or reference number against any of the Papers they may have in their possession.

PREFACE.

IN one of his recent famous Prefaces, Mr Bernard Shaw remarks that, "Political Science means nothing else than the devising of the best ways of fulfilling the will of the world."

Though it is a far cry from the "devising of the ways" to any actual achievements by the State, there is, perhaps, no much better way of contemplating both the devising and the development of the ideas of political science than by a survey of Parliamentary Papers. In these Blue Books we see the suggestions, the discussions, the recorded facts; in a word, we see the "will of the world" in operation.

Like most expressions of Will-Power, it often appears blind, sluggish, and impotent: and again, it may be potent, useful, and determinate. Old ideas are scrapped, and new ideas and new institutions arise in all their aristocracy, to hold the stage until the ever-moving Will shall scrap them too.

As to how the World Will moves, we can say but little. Glories and perils walk on either side. But enough for us that it does move!

HILDA VERNON JONES.

May 1912.

"The public hears a great deal of Blue Books, of their dulness and heaviness; nevertheless, they contain many curious facts, the germs of new laws. They give information of new discoveries; they are official records of the complaints of society; they gather from all quarters illustrations of the evils which Parliament is asked to remedy; they almost invariably refer to what is novel, and are very often the first authentic accounts published of the actual progress of society, or the formation of those new phases with which it is the duty of legislation especially to deal."

"I do not think there is any one who more values the labours of Parliamentary Committees than myself. They obtain for the country an extraordinary mass of valuable information which probably would not otherwise be at hand, or available; and formed as they necessarily are of chosen men from the two most important bodies of the State, their Reports are pregnant with prudent and sagacious suggestions for the improvement of the administration of affairs."—LORD BEACONSFIELD: "Hansard's Debates," vol. 235, page 1478.

"Knowledge is of two kinds. We know a subject ourselves or we know where we can find information upon it. When we enquire into any subject, the first thing we have to do is to know what books have treated of it."—SAMUEL JOHNSON.
